Objectives:

At the conclusion of the conference, the participant should be able to:

1. Discuss the alternatives to hysterectomy for treatment of cervical, uterine, ovarian, and related gynecologic cancers.
2. Identify the level of inherent risk to the patient for fertility-sparing surgery.
3. Discuss the subsequent chances of achieving term pregnancy.
4. Identify the options for fertility preservation prior to cancer treatment.
5. Describe the options for family building following cancer treatment.
6. Describe future options regarding fertility in the cancer patient.

Conference Speakers:

John O. Schorge, M.D.

Dr. Schorge is currently Chief of the Gynecologic Oncology Division at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. He belongs to many professional societies, has received distinguished honors and awards, and is very active in a variety of medical committees as well as funded and unfunded projects. He has published a number of peer-reviewed and non-peer-reviewed publications, narrative reports and editorial reviews.
